Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health of sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were 20 men, aged 40-50 years, who were sedentary and had no history of cardiovascular disease. They were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The exercise group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The control group did not exercise. The physical fitness and health of the subjects were measured at the beginning and end of the 12-week period. The results showed that the exercise group had significantly higher levels of physical fitness and health than the control group at the end of the 12-week period.

THEY SPOT THE PHONEY GEMS

They Are the Stone Sleuths of the Gemological Institute, and Their Job Is To Detect the Deeds

NOT long ago, a well-to-do American sitting in a Paris hotel opened his door to a no-nonsense visitor. The visitor waited no time in getting to the point:

"Mr. Smith, I know you, but you do not know me. I was a German citizen until I became an inmate of a concentration camp. At that time I lost all of my possessions except the family jewels.
And now I am forced to sell them. For the sake of clearing American dollars,
I will let you have some valuable commodities at a fraction of their actual value."

Whereupon the visitor opened a secret flap in the toe of his shoe and removed from the hollow the superb commodities set in a jewel case.

The American examined the commodities and believed them to be genuine.

"What are you asking for them?" he asked.

"The stones are easily worth $150,000 as you no doubt realize," answered
the visitor, "but for the sake of a quick sale, I will let you have them for $5,000."

"They look good, and the price is right. But, there's a jewelry shop down the street. Would you mind if I had the commodities appraised?"

"Not at all," returned the visitor. "I don't blame you one bit. Let us go."

At the shop, the jeweler examined
the gems through his loop and nodded approvingly.

"Excellent!" Worth in the neighborhood of $100,000, I would say."

When the American returned to the United States, he took his purchase to a well-known jeweler for another appraisal. The jeweler examined the commodities and said:

"They look genuine. But there's only one way to be absolutely sure—by taking them to the laboratory of the Gemological Institute."

In the lab, the gems were placed in side an oil device in which they were exposed to ultraviolet light rays. The remarkable rock as a considered color.

The Institute collection shook his head. "But never, I'm afraid. These emeralds are synthetic. They're remarkable imitations. Genuine emeralds would not even brownish red under ultraviolet. They would turn a sort of pastel orange color."

Theologian never was. And "But I had them appraised. A jeweler said they were genuine!"

"You can hardly blame him," said the jeweler. "As I said, the stones are perfect duplicates of the real thing. And that is why the gem detectors cannot recognize."

What are the gem detectors?

Actually, they belong to an organization known as the Gemological Institute of America. With offices in New York, the Institute, which is controlled by the nation's jewelry industry, has chalked up an amazing record of fake gem detection since its inception back in 1931. Thanks to scientific instruments it invented.

A mere 25 years ago, the great majority of jewelers could not place an exact value on a gem. In most cases, fakes could not always be told from genuine stones. All that's different now, because of the gem detectors.

While no one has ever tried to make a synthetic diamond, rocks have often tried to pass as diamonds three other minerals which, to the untrained eye, resemble diamonds. Zircon, synthetic sapphire, and synthetic quartz. Even now there have been tales told by these sparkling synthetics. One jeweler recently noted that synthetic sapphire sparkles even more than a diamond.

But gem detectors submit divided views to a device called a refractometer, which measures the degree of deflection a beam of light undergoes while passing through a transparent gem. No other stone, real or fake, can show down the speed of light with exactly the same degree as the diamond. Hence, the jeweler can tell on the instant if the diamond is a true one, or fake.

Of all the previous stones, most people are fooled by the synthetic sapphire. But even chemical analysis can detect the difference between real sapphires and synthetics.

The gem dealer, who looked for months to create a perfect synthetic sapphire some months ago, was on the point of selling it to a wealthy suburbanite when the Gemological Institute stepped in.

The Institute came up with the startling information that genuine sapphire stones flow, resulting from the gem's growth, while synthetics are unable to duplicate these flows—and come out too perfect.

By such means, gem detectors have made the jewelry industry a far safer one than it was before.
